Brookhart Defeats Cummins for Senatorship

CLUB HOUSE AND HOME IS HIS DESIRE

VETERAN IS BEHIND OVER 40,000 VOTES

Insurgent's Supporters Claim His Vindication by Electors

BULLETIN

Des Moines, Ia., June 8.—(AP)—Colonel Smith W. Brookhart's lead over Senator Albert B. Cummins for the republican senatorial nomination was increased to 47,891 today when returns had been received from 1,800 precincts out of 2,447.

The Brookhart vote, 160,931 against 113,040 for Cummins, was 43.5 percent of the total vote cast. Howard J. Clark had received 50,015 in the 1,800 precincts. Dan Reardon, 3,781 and L. E. Eickelberg, 3,416.

Claude R. Porter, Des Moines, was leading his three democratic opponents for the senatorial nomination at midday by nearly 5,000 votes, and maintaining a percentage of 43.6. A 35 percent vote is required for nomination.

Porter's vote in 346 precincts was 12,793. J. Ray Files of Fort Dodge was second with 7,552; J. C. Murtagh of Waterloo, third, with 6,151 and George Finch, who conceded Porter's nomination, had 2,392.

Des Moines, Ia., June 8.—(AP)—Colonel Smith W. Brookhart, who returned to Iowa two months ago as an unelected United States senator and launched his campaign for "vindication," as he termed it, today was one step ahead in his fight for reposition of his toga. The insurgent republican was nominated in yesterday's primary to carry the republican banner in the general election in November, defeating the veteran Senator Albert B. Cummins by what promises to be a wide margin. He still has the general election in November to face in his attempted "comeback."

Brookhart adherents hailed the outcome as an expression by Iowa voters on what they declare was the unjust ousting of the Colonel by the Senate, as an endorsement of his fight for farm relief legislation and some even claimed it was a rebuff to the national administration for failure to take a more vigorous stand on behalf of agriculture.

Victor is 83rd

Colonel Brookhart who will again lead the ticket of a party whose central committee declared him a traitor to his partisans in the 1924 election, made no comment on the result early today, but his campaign manager, Major Frank D. Lund, issued a statement thanking the voters for supporting Brookhart and praising their judgment in action on the issues raised.

Cummins headquarters issued no statement other than to admit that "it looks as though Brookhart has won," while from the headquarters of Howard J. Clark, a third candidate, came a statement that was interpreted in some quarters as a hint that he might oppose Brookhart as an independent in the coming election. His managers recalled the platform he put forth in the primary campaign for agricultural relief and concluded:

"We assure the voters that this campaign will continue until we have succeeded."

Clark as Independent

There have been intimations from other sources that Clark was merely introducing himself to the voters in the primary and would enter the November campaign as an independent if Brookhart should be nominated.

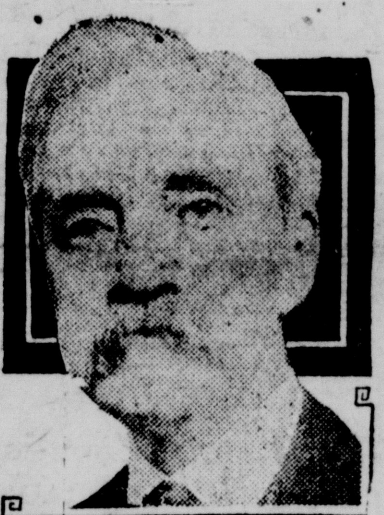

Col. Brookhart assumed a lead in the tabulations early in the evening and maintained it through the night. He led early today having mounted 16 more than 40,000, with 1,436 of the 2,447 precincts reported. The Brookhart plurality was rolled up in nearly all the rural counties, and a number of the more populous districts also gave him the advantage.

His lead amounted to nearly 50 percent of the total vote cast, while only 35 percent is required by the primary law for nomination. His campaign managers were claiming that his plurality would be about 75,000.

In the democratic senatorial contest, Claude R. Porter, who has several times been a candidate for the Senate, was leading J. G. Murtagh, of Waterloo, and J. Ray Files of Fort Dodge by several thousand. Porter's percentage, like that of Brookhart, had been running well above the necessary 35 percent throughout the night. Mr. Porter is a Des Moines man.

WET CANDIDATE FOR SENATOR IN THIRTEENTH DIST.

Geo. Brennan Met Democratic Committeemen in Freeport Today

Freeport, Ill., June 8.—(300)—(AP)—Modification of the Volstead act would remedy one fault in the agricultural structure by increasing the price of the farmer's, George E. Brennan, democratic candidate for the United States senate from Illinois, told the audience before which he opened his downstate campaign here today.

"My election to the United States senate," he said to the democratic precinct committeemen of the Thirteenth Congressional District, "will result in modification of the Volstead act. Members of the senate will take this referendum as the expressed will of the people, not only in Illinois, but virtually throughout the middlewest, and they will act accordingly."

"Within a very short time after the senate has acted, in my opinion, the price of Illinois corn will be up to a level where there will be profit in it for every corn grower."

Divided His Attention

Dividing his attention between the issues of dry law modification and agricultural relief, Brennan ordered the party workers to be prepared for a campaign of misrepresentation against his candidacy.

Without "posing as a Moses who will solve the perplexing agricultural difficulties," Brennan proclaimed himself in favor of "any plan or program that will assure better prices to the farmer for what he raises."

Quoting the agricultural plank of the Illinois democratic party, Brennan declared that "from a purely selfish reason, I would do everything humanly possible to bring about better conditions in the agricultural districts of this state. For my business in Chicago, the successful business of every man in the United States depends largely in the long run on the farmer's prosperity."

The democratic leader's address was the first of a series he will make before conferences of party workers in the section of the state outside Chicago.

He told the committeemen that it was up to them to present the real issues of the campaign to the people of their district.

"We are going to face bitter opposition and misrepresentation," he said. "The greatest enemy of temperance that exists in the nation today is the Anti-Saloon League. You have only to recall the conditions that existed before the passage of the Volstead Act to realize this. In every part of the country the consumption of alcohol as a beverage was decreasing. There was a steady growth of public sentiment in favor of temperance. The saloon, which had once been the place where business contracts were ratified, was being shunned by business men. The moving picture theaters had replaced the barrooms as the places where idle hours were spent."

Then Came Legislation

"Then came the ill-timed legislation and the change in conditions which were so satisfactory to all those who believed in real temperance."

EXPLOSION IN SEWER CAUSE OF INJURY TO ELEVEN AND SERIOUS FIRE IN NEW YORK

Dumping of Gasoline and Oil Into Sewer Was Cause

New York, June 8.—(AP)—Destruction of near earthquake proportions in the region of the Hudson river day line pier at 129th street today, told a tale of a grim battle between the combined forces of firemen, police and surgeons against a spectacular fire caused by terrific sewer explosions.

Eleven men were injured, one seriously, when gas in a seven and a half foot sewer exploded late yesterday. Fire started immediately under the pier and raged fiercely for nine hours before river and land fire fighting forces extinguished it.

Gustavus Adolphus, crown prince of Sweden, was one of the hundreds of spectators who watched two fire boats and a small army of shore firemen fight the blazes. While flames were at their height, belching heavy smoke out over the river, the Corsair, J. P. Morgan's yacht, with the Prince aboard, passed within a few hundred feet, headed downstream.

Police said that prior to the explosion, gas company employees had been investigating the neighborhood for leaks. Residents in the vicinity ascribed the explosion to numerous garbage dumping gasoline and oil into the sewers.

DIXON WITHOUT LEGALIZED RESIDENCE SECTION

Discovery Made at a Meeting to Discuss No. Side Paving

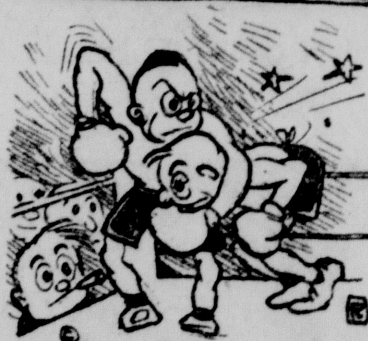

Another meeting of north side property owners was held at the city hall last evening for the purpose of discussing methods of improving several blocks of streets with a resurfacing material. Another representative of a process paving company was present and submitted a very good proposition which was taken under consideration. As in the past, the desires of the property owners are widely divided and one group has presented a petition to the city council asking for concrete.

At last evening's meeting, it developed that the city of Dixon is without a legalized residence section, and this fact stands in the way of certain methods of improving and maintaining north side streets. However, there is talk today of creating a residence section by the passage of an ordinance, which would then make it possible to close certain streets to heavy traffic and proceed with a resurfacing program which would be satisfactory to a large number of the property owners.

W. W. Trautman has gone to Moline, Mich., where he was called by the illness of his mother, Mrs. L. C. Trautman. Word reached here last evening she had passed away.

Last Traces Street Car System Removed by City's Efforts

A force of workmen are busy in the down town section today removing the final traces of the one-time enterprising street car system. The curve at Galena avenue and First street was removed this morning and the wrecking crew were working toward the bridge where the tracks will also be removed to the approaches on both sides of the river.

Along all of the paved streets, the rails are being left and a force of men are pouring hot tar via the openings and surfacing with pea gravel, making a smooth surface. It is the plan to leave the rails in for the present, except at certain points where they are considered dangerous to traffic.

TRAGEDY MARKED INAUGURATION OF NEW AIR SERVICE

One Pilot of Chicago-Minneapolis Route Was Killed Monday

St. Paul, Minn., June 8.—(AP)—Tragedy inaugurated the new Twin Cities to Chicago air mail service yesterday.

Elmer Partridge, 38, of Chicago, was killed when his plane crashed near Mendota, Minn., about nine miles southwest of here.

Nimmo Black, who arrived safely in the Twin Cities with the first air mail from Chicago, nearly met the same fate when he just missed the Mississippi river bluffs near LaCrosse, Wis. E. L. Laird, bound for the Twin Cities from Chicago, was forced down by head winds at LaCrosse, Wis., while H. J. Keller, relief pilot, came down near Bangor, Wis., not far from LaCrosse on account of fuel trouble. Both spent the night at the respective towns.

Pilot William Brock hopped off from St. Paul late in the day, reached Chicago in ample time to make connections with the 7:30 p. m. plane for New York.

Winds Were Terrible

All the flyers reported that the heavy winds encountered were the worst in their years of aviation. It was believed by air port officials here that Partridge, a veteran air man, met death because he was fatigued and was overcome, soon after he had left Minneapolis, by air sickness, brought on by the 45 mile wind. Another theory was that some part of his ship was broken by the strain, and caused him to lose control.

Partridge had been a navigator since 1911. During 1916 and 1917 he was a civilian army instructor at Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill. A widow and son survive.

Despite the setbacks of the first day, supporters of the air mail here expressed confidence that the service would prove successful and the number of merchants sent orders for merchandise to be returned via the air route. Some 30,000 pieces of mail were shipped from the Twin Cities in the first trip.

THREE CONFESSED ASSAULT ON MISS WESTERVELT, COED

Judge Will Pass Sentence on Youths June 15, He Says

Rockford, Ill., June 8.—(AP)—Everette Wilson, Stanley Hurt and Leonard Rich, accused of originally assaulting Dorothy Westervelt, DeKalb college co-ed, changed their plea to guilty when taken before Judge William J. Fulton in DeKalb county circuit court at Sycamore this morning.

After a conference with the three defendants in his chambers the court announced that he would hear testimony and pronounce sentence on June 15.

Wilson and Hurt were students at DeKalb with Miss Westervelt. With Rich they were charged with having attacked the girl during an automobile ride on April 16.

Miss Westervelt was found unconscious in front of the home of a DeKalb friend the morning after the ride.

Attorneys for the three youths indicated repeatedly that they would offer a stout defense before a jury, but suddenly determined today upon pleas of guilty, under which all proceedings will henceforth be in the nature of a plea for judicial leniency in the sentence.

LIFE INSURANCE UNDERWRITERS IN MEETING HERE DISCUSS CONDITIONS OF ILLINOIS INSURANCE STATUTES

The regular June meeting of the Rock River Association of Life Insurance Underwriters, was held in this city last evening. A dinner was served in the guild rooms of St. Luke's Episcopal church at 5:30 which was followed by an important business session. Secretary Brown read a communication from the national body in which the new Rock River association was praised as being among the most active in the United States. The underwriters discussed the proposition of discontinuing their regular monthly meetings during July and August, but no action was taken.

Chairman Henry Heiss of Sterling of the entertainment committee, provided a novel program for the forty members who were present. The first number was a vocal solo given by John E. Enright of thidity, accompanied by Frank J. Gorman. The soloist responded to a hearty applause. "The Heart of a Mistake," was the subject of a clever little playlet presented by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stager and company of Sterling. A sketch which was very appropriate to the insurance writers. Miss Marion Cahill and Frank J. Gorman of this city were enthusiastically applauded and responded to encore numbers with duets and solos.

Nine members of the organization were selected to meet at a later date and elect officers for the coming year. A communication was read calling attention to the deplorable condition of Illinois insurance laws and calling upon the state organization to effect a radical change in existing conditions which were held to be among the worst in the country.

Property is One of the Show Places of City; Ideal for Home

The beautiful residence property of Col. and Mrs. W. B. Brinton at East Everett street and Brinton avenue in north Dixon, one of the outstanding show places of Dixon and vicinity, will in all probability soon become the home of the Masonic orders of Dixon through the public spirited generosity of the owners, who have offered the spacious house and half block of ground to the lodges for club house and meeting purposes.

The offer of Col. and Mrs. Brinton was formally laid before the building committee which represents all the branches of the order at a meeting Monday evening, and that committee voted unanimously to recommend to each of the lodges the acceptance of the exceptional offer.

Predict Acceptance.

Opinions of many influential Masons, expressed to The Telegraph today, forecast the prompt and grateful acceptance by each of the branches, and early plans for providing Dixon Masons with something the Brintons offer makes possible—a beautiful, commodious and worthy club rooms and meeting place.

The property which is offered the Masons is one of the finest in this section of the state. The large house, erected by the late P. M. Alexander, has been remodelled, improved and beautified by Col. Brinton, and the spacious lawn boasts marvelous gardens and foliage; the front of the residence is of beautiful Victorian architecture with massive columns rising to the roof; the interior is ideal for club room purposes and will furnish more than ample room for all members of the Masonic orders; the garage facilities are excellent; and in fact, the entire property is ideal for the purpose for which the donors wish it used.

Wants It Kept Up.

In telling of his decision to donate the property—the purchase of which the Masons had attempted to negotiate some time ago—to the order, Col. Brinton stated he was influenced largely by a sentimental desire that the property be kept up to its present beauty in years to come, and he said he was sure if the Masons took it over it would never be allowed to deteriorate in upkeep or in beauty.

It was intimated today that with the acceptance of the wonderful bequest the Masonic building committee would at once plan for the erection of a large, handsome and modern lodge hall and banquet room at the rear of the big residence, leaving that handsome building for club and lounging room purposes.

The WOMAN'S DAY

By Allene Sumner

Never Did Like Her!

It seems to me that this Winifred Sackville Stoner tribe has gotten away with murder in this country quite long enough. Ever since I was a child of a year or so, eating flies because no one advised me that they were not gastronomic tidbits, I've been subjected to tales of the wonderful prodigy, Winifred Sackville Stoner, and her equally wonderful mother. Always appearing in print telling what was wrong with everybody and everything else. Now it seems the stage's the thing which is all wrong. So Winifred and her mother are out to reform it with a little play by themselves, with pure and righteous lines like this—

"Wrap yourself in mystery and always wear pink lingerie!"

Patty Horn, Pastor

I am very prejudiced against child preachers. So was ready with my little gun for one much-advertised Patty Horn, 19, preacher in Promise City, Iowa. But she has done or said nothing as yet for which she really needs to be shot. She uses a powder puff and has a shingle bob and applies the lipstick when she wants to and she does not think young people of today are going to perdition, so I may be inclined to change my mind about these youthful exhorters to the true faith.

No-Woman's Land!

Women of the Kongo country are not allowed to eat with "the men folks," and are lucky if they get anything at all to eat, as the men leave remnants not as tokens of duty to "the women folks" but only because they themselves are replete. This news item comes from the explorer and huntress, Mrs. Carl Akeley, but recently returned from an African hunting trip.

Naive Mourning Garb

When a native woman loses her husband, Mrs. Akeley narrates, she smears her body with white clay. As the clay peels off, she is in half mourning and can begin going to the wild tribal dances again and casting amorous orbs at another prospective mate. Now, altogether, sing loudly and lustily "The Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady!"

Sweet Revenge

I am inclined to hustle this recipe off to the scorned women of the Kongo, tell them to set it cooking and let the tantalizing aroma drift into the camp of the gluttonous enemy, the males, denying them any bite or nibble of the feast. Known as oatmeal macaroons. Two eggs beaten lightly and mixed in 1.2 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1.4 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2.4 cups rolled oats, 1.2 cup chopped shelled peanuts. Dropped from teaspoon on oiled sheet and baked in moderate oven.

Table Service

Many hostesses now place the napkin, folded to resemble a long thin roll, on the service plate, rather than to one side.

Mix Your Own!

Our beauties, we learn, now mix their own face powder. Containers may be purchased with a central compartment filled with plain white powder, and four smaller compartments filled with intense shades of ochre, rose, mauve and flame, with which the beauty can mix her own peculiar powder needs.

BY CYNTHIA GREY

There is always the problem of the woman who thinks that because her own little plans have gone awry there is nothing right with the world.

Sometimes it is the woman whose husband has died or deserted her. Then again, it is the mother mourning a favorite child's death—of the girl who has failed in a lifelong ambition, or found her best friend untrue.

And when life has thwarted them, they rail against life and condemn it as not worth the living.

What they seem to miss is the realization that theirs is no unusual case—that life deals black cards to everyone at some time or other.

They have known other people in trouble—but it is so easy to bear other people's grief! When trouble hits them, they beat the air and accuse life of special cruelty.

The best remedy for women in this state of mind is to force an interest in the life around them. Enough dramas are going on within reach to keep their thoughts away from self, if only they would open their eyes and look for the show.

Personal life may be cruelly unsatisfying. Tragedy may have blotted out the sunshine for a time. But life in the abstract is so complex, so woven of rainbow colors as to offer complete diversion for any observer who really seeks it.

Of course the woman who shuts the windows and draws the shades so as not to see the stream of life that passes by, will not recover from the grief within her own doors.

Life doesn't force its gorgeous spectacle upon you. You have to look for it yourself. And the tear-dimmed eyes are the eyes that need it most.

"Think of others instead of self," may sound like priggish moralizing. But any sufferer who has followed the advice will testify that it has sound practical value. The grief-stricken woman who forces herself to think of those about her will find herself benefiting from it more than they do.

Getting through this life is largely a matter of choosing wisely the shades to fix your attention on. When there is nothing in your own life that bears watching—look elsewhere for the show.

"Scarface" Indicted

Chicago, June 7.—(AP)—Al Capone, known as "Scarface Brown," overlord of vice in Chicago, a suburb, was indicted by a federal grand jury with seven other members of rival gangster bands on charges of violating the prohibition laws. Judge James H. Wilkerson announced today. The indictments had been suppressed more than a week.

The grand jury named Al and Ralph Capone with two associates, Charles Facchetti and Peter Payette, in one indictment and their rivals, Mike and Barney O'Donnell, Michael J. Windle and Harry Madigan, in another. Windle was proprietor of the saloon in front of which Assistant State's Attorney William McSwiggin and two companions were slain by gangsters.

About the time the federal indictments again became public, the body of a man who had been shot to death was found on the highway near Hillside, west of the city. He apparently had been assassinated and his body tossed from an automobile, similar to many gangster killings.

Luncheon—

Dinner—

Whole wheat bread and butter and finely minced green onions should be provided for small stay-at-homes who are at the table.

Strawberry Pudding.
One quart berries, 1 cup granulated sugar, 2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup milk, 3 eggs, 1/2 cup melted butter.

Put into a buttered baking dish and sprinkle with sugar. Combine flour, salt and baking powder and sift into mixing bowl. Beat eggs until light and add with milk to dry ingredients. Stir until batter is perfectly smooth. Beat in melted butter, beating mixture hard for two minutes. Pour over berries in baking dish and bake 45 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve warm with hard sauce.

This is a variation from the usual shortcake in that the berries are cooked and eggs are added to "cake." However, no sugar is used in the batter, the fruit alone being sweetened.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT FUNDAMENTALS.

"We must realize that the usefulness of a federal form of government is that it permits variety in national life," said William D. Ainey, chairman of the public service commission of Pennsylvania in a recent interview.

That is one of the fine fundamentals observed in the formation of this government and so greatly disregarded in this era, when need of adherence to it is the greater.

It was conceived in formation of the constitution that the United States could be operated as a federal government to provide for a common defense, to take over administration of affairs of interstate character, such as transportation, and to guarantee a republican form of government. After machinery was provided for these matters national in character, it was left to the states to legislate for themselves, practically the only restrictions being in the bill of rights.

At that time only the thirteen colonies were involved, but farseeing men expressed opinions concerning the land empire on the west. Experiences under the articles of confederation and in the constitutional conventions were themselves evidence of the need of local governments as differentiated from the national government.

Through many generations the trend of migration was from east to west rather than from north to south. People moved in the climatic zones to which they were accustomed. As that movement developed New England, Pennsylvania and Ohio contributed to the population of northern Illinois and Iowa. Virginians followed latitudinal lines into Kentucky and Missouri. Each element carried westward with it the ideals of the colony from which it came. They perpetuated the original differences between New York and New England and Virginia.

Then came the foreign element of northern Europe, which so greatly populated states of the midwest. They colonized and implanted their traditions.

These colonial and even European traditions were localized and under the form of government provided, it was possible for each state to take care of its own local conditions. In early days the hand of the federal government rarely was observed. The postoffice department was about the only government contact of the ordinary individual. The internal revenue department touched dealers in tobacco and liquor. The rest of our contact with government was with local government.

Interstate commerce not only became a large problem in itself, but it made interstate problems of other elements. Pure foods, primarily a local matter, became a matter of interstate commerce. Liquor dealing, originally a local matter, became one of the interstate commerce.

So many questions that formerly were local became national that now we think of nothing as being anything but a national problem.

Our constitution first was formulated to govern a strip along the Atlantic seaboard. By our system of state governments the federation of states has been extended to the Pacific ocean. Conditions peculiar to each region have been reached by state governments of that region. People of one locality do not understand conditions in another. Even if they understand them, the difference of opinion sticks closely to local interest. That is the rock on which the farm problem breaks. The west is the producer and the east is the consumer. All over the forty-eight states are those conflicts of interest.

The state government is the national safety valve.

Life's a lot of trouble. But then you only have to live it one second at a time.

A hen is trying to hatch a $750 condor egg at the Washington zoo. We'll bet she is nervous.

"We're in a nice fix now," said Nick trying to look at Nancy.

It was a very queer about the Twins. They weren't Twins at all any more, but just great flat plashes on the ground like paint.

You could see their heads and faces and hands and feet and clothes, but they looked exactly like pictures someone had painted on the ground.

It must have been because they fell such a distance from the giant boy's hand, that they smashed so flat.

But it hadn't hurt a bit! It felt just as though they had fallen on elder-down pillows.

"We're in a nice fix now," said Nick, trying to look at Nancy.

"I should say so," said Nancy. "If someone could scrape us up, maybe we could roll down a hill and get all right again."

At that minute a man rushed out from a restaurant across the street where he had been baking wheat cakes in a window. His cake turner looked as big as a snow shovel.

"Don't move and I'll fix you," he shouted. "Just a minute."

With that he deftly slid his cake turner under Nancy and scraped her up. Then he slid the cake turner under Nick and scraped him up.

"Now if you'll just roll down this hill," he remarked, "I think you'll be as fit as fiddles again. I'll give you both a start."

Which he did.

Nancy rolled and Nick rolled, and the farther they rolled the more round they became. At last they reached the bottom of the hill and both of them hit a fireplug or what ever it is they have on the moon in case of fire.

That sent them spinning around on their feet, and in three minutes the Twins were back to their own forms and their own size exactly as though nothing had happened.

Both of them began to laugh. "This is a queer place all right," Circle. It is sufficient that I was introduced to the happy-go-lucky people who congregate there. For the last few months I have been stealing away as often as I could—"she stopped and blushed, and then explained, "I am buying these handkerchiefs for Bud because—because I gave the others to Harry."

THE VERY IDEA

by Hal Cochran

GARDENING

A dandy spade from the store once came, and dad, of course, was the one to blame. He bought the thing so's to make his yard look, mighty nice, by workin' hard.

A rake and hoe were the next things bought. Ah, pop was sure in the spirit caught. Hard work thought he, is the thing that brings the beautiful flowers and a lot of things.

A man worked hard every afternoon and seeds all over the place were strewn. The richest dirt for miles around was hauled and dumped on his clay-packed ground.

A smile spread over a toiler's face. Ah, hope had set him a merry pace. But, shucks, he struck with the tire-some gait, and now all he had to do was wait.

The rain came down and the sun came out, and after a week there came a sprout. And was pop pleased? Oh, yes, indeed—until he found it was just a weed.

He watched and prayed for 10 days more and then things started to grow again. And just when his work was about to pay—the rent came due, and they moved away.

Prof. Obergosh Sakes has discovered that, though the world is round, most of it is on the square.

The experience of a man who uses a scalp tonic is a hair-raising, yet uninteresting story.

He never argued with his wife, which really isn't strange.

She never could make up her mind, so he had no mind to change.

It doesn't pay the lender to pay.

Her Own Way.

A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

A CLANDESTINE ESCAPE

I knew the girl I was waiting upon was very rich, for this was the second dozen handkerchiefs she had purchased that day at sixty per. She had bought and paid for them with no fuss whatever and I saw the large roll of bills in the gold mesh bag, which was even more beautiful than the one that Jerry had given me.

I was quite sure also that she belonged to one of those Chicago families that were often referred to as "living on Chicago's gold coast" and by this they meant Lakeshore Drive and its environs.

The girl, however, was very simple and sweet and I could see that she had reached the point in her romance where she had to talk to someone. In the few moments while I was getting her handkerchiefs together she kept still, but there was a lovely smile on her sensitive mouth. As I turned toward her she asked abruptly: "Have you ever danced at The Circle?"

I looked at her curiously. The Circle I remembered was quite notorious as a place where the most Bohemian people in the city congregated. Mamie had told me that there one might meet most any night some of the most imposing society women as well as the aristocracy of the underworld.

"No," I answered, smiling. "I have never been there. I am afraid if I had I would have lost my reputation. I am only a 'poor workin' girl'."

REAL STORY OF BOMBARDMENT OF MONTH AGO TOLD

A. P. Correspondent Gets "Inside" Data on Damascus Warfare

Damascus, June 7.—(AP)—Exhaustive investigation made by a special correspondent of The Associated Press, has made it possible to determine responsibility, reduce facts to a real proportion and give figures of the killed and wounded in the Midan bombardment, although a month has passed since the bombardment.

During the first days of May, Colonel Clement Grandcourt, commanding the French Damascus garrison, was informed that the bandits were concentrating and gathering a stock of grenades, cartridges and rifles in a tumbledown house in the Midan quarter, with a view of concerted attack of Damascus the night of May 7-8.

Disregarded Warning
Col. Grandcourt sent native emissaries to warn the brigands that unless they ceased all military activities within thirty hours, the quarters in which they were located would be bombed and destroyed. As soon as they received the warning, the rebels hastened to remove the women and children, who took refuge in the adjacent gardens of Damascus and adjoining villages, but continued to concentrate munitions.

When the hour fixed in the ultimatum struck, Col. Grandcourt opened fire on the quarters, which is more than a mile from the center of the city. Three and five inch shells rained down on the quarters for three hours. In all, sixty rounds were fired. Several shells hit the store of munitions gathered by the rebels, causing explosions, resulting in heavy loss of life.

Seventy-One Killed
The French authorities announce that the number of persons killed was 71. Sixteen persons, seriously wounded, were treated at the city hospital. The number slightly hurt was impossible to determine, since all of them fled.

An influential Damascus resident, whose sympathies are with the rebels, declares that the number of persons killed was about 100 and the wounded 250, of whom 18 have died.

In the garden battles since June 1, the bandits have lost 60 men killed and 60 made prisoners. The fusillade continues intermittently during the day and becomes more active at night. The French losses have not been heavy. The soldiers are making use of cover afforded by trenches and barbed wire. There are machine guns posted every 200 yards around Damascus. The rebels have no cover.

Serious Fire Swept Galesburg Yesterday

Galesburg, June 7.—(AP)—Fire is sweeping the eastern section of the city near the Burlington depot. The Central Ice Mill, two foundries and seven residences have burned. The flames are fanned by a strong west wind and are making rapid headway. The loss so far will amount to several hundred thousand dollars.

Houses on Cottage Avenue where the fire jumped after destroying the mill and foundry, were scattered, making it possible to fight the flames more easily. The blaze was so hot at one time that a lead of hose was burned.

EXPERIENCES OF A PHOTOGRAPHER ALONG ROCK RIVER HALF A CENTURY AGO TOLD BY VETERAN DIXONITE

The above picture of "The Road Over the Bluffs" above Grand Detour, showing how almost impassable it was, was taken by C. H. Keyes of this city, many, many years ago. Mr. Keyes very entertainingly tells in the following article of a "picture-taking" journey over this road, which he and the late J. Wilbur Crawford made over half a century ago.

By C. H. Keyes

A number of my friends have asked me to write more of the early history of Dixon as I remember it, and their requests have been seconded by your Mr. Geo. Shaw.

I find myself beginning with an account of my first trip up Rock River accompanied by Wilbur Crawford, then a boy, as I recall it about 13 years of age.

Fifty nine years last September 20, I arrived at Dixon with no thought of remaining here but circumstances were such that on the following spring of 1867 I engaged in the Photograph business with James H. Crawford, and the following September purchased his interest and continued in this venture for about 20 years. As my memory serves me it is 52 years last June that I decided on a trial of cut of door photography. Wilbur Crawford had been at the "gallery" located on the third floor of the building that stood where the new City National Bank building now stands.

He was anxious to go with me and stated that he had a tent large enough for us to camp in. After consulting his father and mother it was decided that we start in a few days, and the preparation for that trip was certainly great. For the benefit of the younger people, will say, that making pictures was very much more difficult at that time than now. The plate had to be flamed with collodion, immersed in a nitrate of silver solution before making the exposure. A dark room must be had in which this work was done. At this time I owned a small bob-tailed horse that had been doctored. A rather cruel operation I think, however it gave the animal the appearance of being full of pep. This operation had taken place before I bought him and I claim no credit for it. I also had a two seated wagon then called a "democrat wagon." I could never understand why this name was given it. I took the seats out and made a frame the width of the body and five or six feet long and about four feet high, covered it with three thickness of black cloth. With the back end loose at one corner this could be raised so I could crawl in and after once in whoever assisted me would hold it around the corner post, while with the assistance given by the light of a kerosene lamp, I sensitized the plate, and after the exposure came in again and developed the plate. This seems like a difficult job compared with the dry plate film of today, exposing the film and developing any time within a few days or longer.

We started early one morning with a good supply of bread and butter, hard-boiled eggs, a good large boiled ham and plenty of coffee, with instructions to be careful from Wilbur's father and mother, and to be sure to take a long pole and feel our way when we were in the river. We promised faithfully to do this. We crossed the river on Hawkins Ferry boat, and as he had neither of us been further up the river than Grand Detour, asked Hawkins advice about getting to Castle Rock as the island in the river near it was our plan for camping. Mr. Crawford had told us to use the pole ahead to find the ford. Mr. Hawkins told us we would have a hard time getting there for the road over the bluff was very rough. Between Grand Detour and Castle Rock we met our Irish friend who had been so worked up over the unruly horse on the ferry a short time before, and mentioned in our last article. He seemed pleased to see us and stopped his horses. We asked if he could tell us about the road and how far to Castle Rock. Getting off his wagon he walked around our rig and said, "By the holy mosses, phwat have ye in there?" We told him we were going to take pictures at Castle Rock and that we had a dark room on our wagon. He remarked that "it would be a devilish poor place to take pictures for there was nobody there." He looked the horse over and said "Ye have a nice little horse, I'd like to know phwat ye cut his tail off for." I told him I did not do it that he was that way when I bought him. He then said, "Ye'll never git over the bluff with the pony; for two dollars and fifty cents I'll go back and take ye over." We told him we would try it and after some further talk and his word that he would be coming back in the afternoon and that he lived not far from Castle Rock, and he could let us have milk and if we did not get over the bluff that he would take us over. We started and when we reached the bluff we were just a little afraid we would have to wait until the friend came back. After looking the road over Wilbur said "I'll take the horse by the bridle and lead him and you go by the side of the wagon and keep it from tipping," and so we went about six feet at a time, resting, finally got over and down to the island; tied our horse and took a long stick and after taking our shoes off, felt our way until we found the ford and then drove over. We let the horse loose and set our tent up, got some flat stones, made a fire-place. Wilbur went to the spring east of the road for water and I picked a lot of dead limbs up and spread our cloth for dinner. Started a fire and soon had coffee and dinner all before one o'clock. After a rest we looked the ground over, selecting our place for the views, and at five o'clock the wind went down and we secured three views. Gave the horse his oats, started a fire and had our supper and then a rest before turning in for the night. The next morning there was a strong wind blowing and the wet plate then used required a much longer time in exposure than the dry used at the present time. We decided to reconnoitre that day and Wilbur went for the milk, while I cared for the horse and got breakfast. When Wilbur returned the coffee was ready and we were disappointed to find the milk had been skimmed. The unfavorable weather prevented further picture making for the day. We took our shoes off and waded the ford from the island, going up and down the river and over the top of bluffs and getting points to make pictures of Castle Rock, and at night were tired and sleepy. Our friend had promised to sell us a loaf of bread the next morning, and I told Wilbur to start early and to tell them we wanted two quarts of new milk and that if it was good we would want it every day, while we stayed. At breakfast I asked what they said and Wilbur confessed that he had told them that Mr. Keyes said the milk of the day before had been skimmed, and the man replied "Sure I gave ye the milk just as I drew it from the cow, and oim, thinkin' this hot weather cummin' on the cows been drinkin' too much warthur." We were satisfied with this explanation, and during the remainder of our stay we had good bread and milk. The week was spent in getting views morning and evening while there was no wind, and when we started for home had secured thirty five good stereoscopic views, and on our way home stopped at the bluff that was so hard to climb and took a good picture of the road. I shall be pleased to show my friends if interested. It has the appearance of a stone quarry after a blast. As my memory serves me there were only three teams going over the road the week we spent there. After the picture was taken we drove down to Dana Island and found the ford, drove over and put the tent up. When the pegs were all driven it was dark, and we had our supper by candle-light. The next day we had thunder showers. At no time during the day was there sunshine long enough to dry the ground and we were nearly the whole day in the tent. At 8 o'clock the thunder was continual and lightning was very truly old fashioned. We were afraid the river would rise so that we could not drive off the island. We made a hasty pack up and drove away without getting pictures at that time. With delay in the mud and rain did not arrive at home until the small hours of the morning. About two years later I went over the same ground, Wilbur Crawford and Eustace Shaw making the trip with me. At some future time I may give an account of our experience.

In all the years since when I have met Wilbur and stopped for a talk he would always say, "Those were good old times when we went up the river," and I would say, "Yes."

RAIN PREVENTED ANY GAMES BEING PLAYED IN EAST

American League Clubs, in the West, Furnished Some Good Sport

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Rain, pouring down on the eastern seaboard, has added to the double-header list of National and International League baseball teams. All games scheduled in those circuits yesterday were postponed.
The American clubs, which were in the middle-west and escaped the moisture, furnished four good pitching performances, the most interesting struggle occurring at Detroit, where Ed Wells of the Tigers served his twenty second consecutive scoreless inning when he downed the Washington Senators and Walter Johnson, 1-0.
In the matter of hits, the veteran Johnson outthrew his opponent, for he permitted only four safeties, while Wells allowed five; but Gehring and Hellmann put a double and single together in the opening inning for the only score of the contest. Johnson and Bluege doubled for Washington during the battle, but their mates could not send them across the plate.
Jim Edwards, serving four-hit ball after Thomas has been batted from the mound in the opening frame, gave the White Sox a 10-5 victory over the wearers of the Red Hose from Boston. The Chicagoans gained the advantage in the sixth after an uphill battle and refused to relinquish it. Barrett, of the pale sox, had a perfect day at bat with four singles.
George Uhle of Cleveland took it upon himself to give the New York Yankees a beating and he was successful by a 5-2 score. Besides holding the powerful eastern batsmen to six safe blows, he drove in two of his team's runs with a double. Catcher Pat Collins of the Yankees was banished for protesting a strike decision.
Thirteen hits, including a homer in the fourth by Al Simmons, brought the Philadelphia Athletics the verdict over St. Louis, 7-2. Three doubles also found a place in the Philadelphia base hit column. George Sisler, manager of the Browns, registered a brace of singles and now has hit safely in eleven consecutive contests.

Plug fours were as conspicuous as buckskin breeches when the Oklahoma Indians gathered for their annual convention at Pawhuska, Okla.
Sixteen survivors of the qualifying rounds today were paired in the championship flight of the Missouri Valley women's golf tournament over the Omaha Field Club Course. Owing to the fact that only 54 middle western players competed in the open play, the original number of 32 for the second round was reduced to half that number.
The state will have the aid of Ulysses G. Young, retired Charleston, W. Va., business man in its effort to convict four men and a woman implicated with him for alleged poisoning of four race horses at Aurora, Ill., two weeks ago in a betting plot. Young, who made a complete statement of his part in the affair when arraigned last night, said he would appear as a state witness before the grand jury.

Big Jim Edwards southpaw pitcher, has convinced Manager Collins of the White Sox that he is ready for a regular turn on the hill. He lost a tough game in St. Louis last week after allowing only four hits, and yesterday he went nine innings and again was touched for only four hits.
Willie Kamm, hot corner guard of the White Sox, was one of the busiest men in the Red Sox game. He had two putouts and nine assists, and more than half of his chances were hot ones to handle.
Bill Barrett, Sox outfielder, has about forgotten about his bum knee and is beginning to spank the ball hard. He had four hits in as many times up.
"Eabe" Ruth pulled a "Casey" at

Gus Forman, left handed pitcher who had a trial with the White Sox two years ago, has been signed by the Boston Red Sox.

MARSHALL HEADS DIXON MINISTERS ASSN. THIS YEAR

Chosen President at Annual Election of Association Monday

Officers of the Dixon Ministers' Association for 1926-27, chosen at yesterday's meeting, will be: Pres., W. W. Marshall; Vice Pres., L. W. Walter; Sec.-Treas., A. W. Carlson. No regular meetings of the Association will occur until September, but only called sessions, as occasions may necessitate. F. Brandtner and A. W. Carlson are the committee on next year's program.

Yesterday the speaker was Rev. A. W. Barwick of Sterling, who outlined the plan of Week-Day Religious Education that fourteen of the Sterling and Rock Falls churches have been following for five years with splendid success, in co-operation with the public schools. Two high class teachers are employed, and credit is allowed in the high school, but not in the college. Attendance is voluntary, of course, but in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades last year 86% of all students enrolled. The annual budget is about $4,000.

Monday, June 21, at Lowell Park, the ministers and families of Sterling, Rock Falls, and Dixon will have their annual outing. The "Y" secretaries of the two groups will direct the program of games and contests.

This summer's union Sunday evening services will be held in the open air, probably the Haymarket Park. They begin July 4th, and except for the Assembly period (Aug. 1-15) continue until the end of August. Seven churches will participate.

No Matter How Long or How Bad You Suffer Stop It Easy.

"Yes, I know of hundreds of men who have relieved their wives' lame back completely by using the liniment we use out at the big league baseball parks," declares Mike Martin, the man who trains and looks after the health of Walter Johnson, the great pitcher, and the other 24 men on the Washington Ball Team "Senators."

WOMEN PRAISE IT. "It may smell and look like other liniment but it isn't. We naturally use the finest that money can buy on the big stars. It doesn't pay to fool with old fashioned weaker kinds. # BROKEN HEARTS OF HOLLYWOOD

BY EDWARD CLARK
Copyrighted by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"BROKEN HEARTS OF HOLLYWOOD" with Louise Dresser is a Warner picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Mutually attracted, beautiful Betty Terwilliger and handsome Hal Chutney arrive in Hollywood as prize winners of newspaper contests for movie tryouts. Marshall, reputed to be responsible for many of the "broken hearts of Hollywood," takes an interest in Betty. Hal and Betty are depressed and amazed by the number of people seeking work. Movie oldtimers see a mysterious resemblance in Betty to someone they cannot remember. Betty is handed a scanty one-piece bathing suit to don, while Hal, who never rode a horse, finds himself cast with a bunch of real cowboys—

Everyone in the room seemed to know everyone else; Hal felt lonely, and out of the friendly circle. But Hal was, after all, a bright chap and when he could get his brain functioning sanely, what with the excitement and confusion, the shouting and swearing, he grimly resolved that the wisest course would be to conceal from these rough citizens the fact that he was a greenhorn. He would watch them closely, as to dressing, and making-up, and mannerisms—then imitate them as he went along. Now or never, if he had any ability to act, was the time to call it into play.

He industriously recalled all the human cowboys he had ever seen on the screen, and with them in their lassos hitched to their belts, and so on, the hard-bitten cowpunchers smacked their hips in joyous anticipation of fun on the set at the greenhorn's expense. The assistant director, frantic at the last minute to discover that Hal had no make-up on, charged upon him and pushed him back into the seat, then pattered sunburn powder thickly on his face. "Your mug would look as shiny as a coon's heel without this!" he snarled. Hal had by this time noted that all executives of this high pressure industry snarl—never talk. Presently he was following in the wake of the crowd of cowboys as they clanked, booted and bespurred, down the iron-treaded cement stairways and out of the buildings across the street to an adjacent lot, where was set up the exterior of a Western mining village saloon. Hal, imitating the peculiar bow-legged roll of the men ahead of him—a deformity and a gait that comes to legs spread since pliable childhood by the harsh leather of saddles and the bulging sides of horses—toyed nonchalantly with his lariat and wished that the boys and girls back in Centipede, Iowa, could see him now. He hoped that this picture would be shown at the Coliseum Theatre on Main Street. He made up his mind to face the camera as much as possible, with the ulterior thought of appearing to best advantage for the edification of his mother and sister and friends.

In the street outside the building were a number of small boys, and cluttered around the actual set itself—in the yard, outside the limits beyond which small boys could not penetrate past jaundiced watchmen—was the usual crowd of hangers-on; extra girls waiting to be called, technicians, assistants. Hal swaggered unconsciously for the benefit of all these—the small boys in particular—and swelled his chest to see their admiring looks. Observing the many girls around the set, he recalled all his Main Street shik-shik talents and showed off for all he was worth.

Unfortunately, owing to his inexperienced twirling of it, his lariat became unloosed and coiled to the ground, catching in his feet and pitching him face first upon the set directly under the nose of the testy director, to the vast amusement of the onlookers and the other cowboys who had never relaxed, since leaving the dressing room, in their covert watching of his showing off antics.

This, then, was Hal Chutney's first entrance upon a motion picture set. He picked himself up out of the dust with the contemptuous remark of the director, "Who is this clown?" ringing in his ears; and discreetly betook himself to the rear of the crowd, which was ranging in a loose group to await instructions.

With Hal's withdrawal from his immediate vicinity, some of the director's injured dignity upon having a mere extra tumble in front of him was eased; although for the rest of the day he "took it out" on the entire company. For here was a worse sin than that of a Horse Guard had tripped and fallen in front of the throne of the King of England during a levee.

Stablemen brought in and tethered to the railing in front of the saloon two dozen restive, wild-looking horses, which Hal eyed with considerable misapprehension. Meanwhile the director in a raspy and slightly faltering voice, through a megaphone which, unobtrusively, assistant held for him, gave curt instructions to the cowboys.

"Now you punchers are inside the saloon, drinking—see? Skinner comes out and mounts his horse—see?—then fires his pistol and dashes away—see? When you hear the pistol you rush out pell-mell—see?—and leap on your horses and ride in pursuit of him—see?"

Hal, listening and nodding with the rest, felt himself trembling all over with nervousness. He looked over the horses with diffident eyes, trying to select a tame looking one. Now, just how was it that he had seen Tom Mix and Bill Duncan jump upon their horses in just such situations? Let's see—from the left? No, from the right. They held the horse's mane with one hand, and the saddle pommel with the other. But first didn't they put a foot in the stirrup? No—they just jumped on in a flying leap from the ground. So his thoughts raced—dubiously. Somehow those horses' backs looked very high above the ground, now that he was faced with the necessity of vaulting upon one.

The director was continuing: "It's a cinch of a scene, see? Nothing but mounting and riding—see? So we won't rehearse. Just shoot right off—see? Mind now, put some life into it—rush out in a fury, for you know that this bad man has just seduced the postmaster's daughter—see? Keep shouting, 'he ain't done right by our pal's gal'—see? That will infuse spirit into your acting. All right—let's go!"

mind he affected a nonchalance, and hurried to change his clothes.

"Aw, give a guy some elbow room, can't yuh?" he growled at the profane men on either side of him.

They looked at him quickly; he was big and husky. But even while they stared, Hal threw aside his coat, tie, and hat with a swagger, and started to attempt to roll a cigarette with one hand—just as he had seen Tom Mix do it times without end, just as he had noticed and watched some of the cowboys in this room doing around him. Of course, his unpracticed fingers made a sorry mess of the trick; and although he tried to hide his ineptness, his dressing table neighbors saw through his pose in that flash, and nudges began to go around the room.

From that moment some of the noise died away, as all hands began to surreptitiously watch and enjoy Hal's attempts to prove his manly right to be considered as "one of them."

Hal presently became conscious that he was the cynosure for all eyes, and he thought it was because he was so good. Of course, there were certain little mishaps, such as putting on his chaps backward, and ripping his B. V. D.'s on his spurs—the latter a stunt that called for particular awkwardness—but Hal thought that he had covered up his mistakes so quickly and cleverly that the fellows could not possibly "get wise."

"Pulling these on and off every day for ten years, a guy is bound to get careless!" he chuckled hoarsely, after he had discovered that chaps are seatless, but that he had given his seat by putting the front where the seat—wasn't.

"There did you cross brands, pardner?" grinned one sly puncher. "Arise!" said Hal offhand in his best imitation of a hardboiled rancher.

And the roar that went up when Hal thus innocently confessed himself as an ex-horse thief shook the dressing table mirrors, and left Hal exceedingly mystified.

The assistant director, returning at this moment from a brief excursion elsewhere, put a quick stop to the bantering by ordering all hands on the set. While Hal quickly completed his dressing by taking tentative note of how the other boys had

Oh, yes, there's a "Charleston Palace." At last a place big enough to house all the Charleston hounds in New York. "Devoted exclusively to the art of Charleston," reads a dodger. But then, I never did claim to be an artist.

"Frozen custard" will be the summer fashion in what to eat when boardwalking. A second cousin to "Eskimo pie." And a dozen new methods of disguising the good old "hot dog." Advice to young inventors: Discover any new trick summer resort dish and get rich.

very sizeable town makes it appearance. A year round population commutes to New York, but makes the healthiest part of its income in summer. Just now cellars are being turned upside down to rent at all sorts of fancy figures during the hot months. Families that in winter occupy five-room flats somehow crowd into a single room and make a nest egg for the winter by renting the other four. Many housewives who live within a stone's throw of the attractions that bring millions find no time to see them. There is a tale of one woman who has been trying for several years to break away from summer boarders long enough to see Coney, but just when she finds time the season is over.
